Brand History

A3 Performance was founded by Dan and Amy Meinholz in 2004 as a proprietary brand of All-American Aquatics, a nationally recognized swim team dealer. A3 Performance quickly became known for developing some of the top swimming goggles and training equipment in the sport of swimming. As demand for A3 Performance product grew, so did A3's product offering. Today, A3 Performance is proud to offer a full line of competitive swimwear including training suits, swim caps, goggles, training equipment, BODIMAX Sleeves, and elite technical racing suits.

Motivated to better serve customers and to improve swimmers' training and racing, Dan and Amy are dedicated to developing products that enhance athletic performance.

As former national champions, Big Ten champions, and collegiate swimmers for the University of Wisconsin-Madison, Dan and Amy have a thorough understanding of the culture and demands of the sport of swimming. Their experience and expertise facilitates the development of innovative products. A3 products have become the choice of National Champions, American Record Holders, NCAA Champions, World Record Holders, and Olympic Gold Medalists.

The drive and effort of Dan and Amy has not changed in their transition from athletes to business owners. Dan and Amy are driven to be their best with a goal to become the best. A3 Performance is dedicated to bringing innovative swimwear and products that allow you to train better, swim faster, and be your best.

Six solid colors are approved for use in all A3 assets and brands. These are considered primary colors because values are used throughout company branding and help establish a base palette. Swatches are mainly used for background and font colors.

Navy: The shade of navy is our primary company swatch, but must be used sparingly in the design realm. Usage of the swatch is most successful when it's used to compliment a design and provide "pops" of color. Avoid creating compositions that consume >50% of the Navy swatch – it will quickly become visually overwhelming.

Red: The shade of red is our primary company swatch, but must be used sparingly in the design realm. Usage of the swatch is most successful when it's used to compliment a design and provide sparse "pops" of color.

Gold: Considered a secondary swatch that's used to compliment a composition with a pleasant contrast primarily used for text and callouts.

Cyan: Considered a secondary swatch that's used to compliment a composition with a pleasant contrast primarily used for text and composition background colors.

Black: Tertiary swatch used primarily for text and composition background colors.

White: Tertiary swatch used primarily for text and composition background colors.

Navy Pantone 295C and Red Pantone 200C are the official colors for the A3 corporate logo.

This color palette is meant to be used for A3 Performance and all subsequent brands including: PHENOM, BODIMAX, NOVA, VICI, STEALTH, and LEGEND.

*A3 Kids has a separate palette. See next page.

Seven solid colors are approved for use in all the A3 Kids assets and brand. These are considered primary colors because values are used throughout the branding and help establish a base palette. Swatches are mainly used for background and font colors.

Lime: The shade of lime is our primary company swatch, but must be used sparingly in the design realm. Usage of the swatch is most successful when it's used to compliment a design and provide "pops" of color.

Yellow: The shade of yellow is our primary brand swatch, but must be used sparingly in the design realm. Usage of the swatch is most successful when it's used to compliment a design and provide "pops" of color.

Pink: Considered a secondary swatch that's used to compliment a composition with a pleasant contrast primarily used for text and callouts.

Purple: Considered a secondary swatch that's used to compliment a composition with a pleasant contrast primarily used for text and callouts.

Orange: Considered a secondary swatch that's used to compliment a composition with a pleasant contrast primarily used for text and composition background colors.

Black: Tertiary swatch used primarily for text and composition background colors.

White: Tertiary swatch used primarily for text and composition background colors.

This color palette is meant to be bright and vibrant in sparse uses.

When creating a composition with heavier background color usage, a less saturated version of the color is acceptable with company approval.
